

What is autism?

Autism is a broad range of behavioural characteristics that create barriers for children in learning language, social skills, self-help skills, and other age-appropriate skills. Some of these characteristics are things that parents want to see less of, such as tantrums, spinning, or crying. Others are delays in areas we would like to see the child learn to do more independently, such as communicating with others, playing with peers, and eating a variety of foods.

What is Applied Behavioural Analysis (ABA) Therapy?

At Early Autism Services, we use ABA Therapy as a tool to help your child operate at age-appropriate levels. Our individualised, structured therapy program is tailored specifically to your child's needs, as well as the needs of your family as a whole. One-on-one sessions occur in your home, at daycare, or in another familiar environment at a minimum of 20 hours per week — the most effective regimen for measurable change, according to clinical research.

A lot of what makes EAS distinctive is in their years of experience. They create cohesive, highly skilled teams, from the program manager to the line therapists. While they have an established curriculum, they also maintain flexibility based on the child's strengths and specific family needs. I really appreciate the collaborative nature of the parent-therapist relationship they strive to maintain.”
